Meeting of Church School Board of Management

A lengthy but very interesting meeting was held recently in connection with the United Sunday School at the home of Mrs. R. R. Saunders where the Board of Management appointed at the Annual meeting, via Mrs. Kemper and Mr. R. Hill met with the teachers and officers of the S. S. to elect the new officials for the coming year.

The first to be filled was that of superintendent, Mrs. McCann requesting to be relieved from office. Several nominations were in order with the nominees to be consulted in the near future in regard to accepting this office but with refusals in every case.

Mr. Tharle and Howard had Sunday dinner with the Lyles. Mrs. Tharle is expected home from the Hat today.

R. R. Saunders has laid up with a bad throat but is able to be around again.

Here's to the Literary Society play. Let's go.

The touchers are as follows—
Beginners class, Mrs. Smith;
Primary class, Miss Verna Ingraham; Girls Juniors, Mrs. Saunders; Boys Intermediate Class, Mr. McCullough.

The young girls class was re-organized with Mrs. Kemper as teacher. Rev. V. M. Gilbert will teach the Adult class. A new order of service for the School was arranged which will be of marked interest to the children. In order to conduct the memory work assignment and for the fifteen minute special service for the children, it was deemed necessary to open the School at 10:30 instead of 11:00 o'clock. It is felt that with the new order and the special interest awakened, the attendance will increase. Many other discussions of interest took place. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. McCann for her work in the past year and she in turn expressed appreciation to the teachers and officers for their loyal support and interest in the work of the School. The present Superintendent and Associate will carry on till the next regular meeting.

A Scheme To Raise Prices.

The tremendous decline in prices of all primary products in Canada, in common with similar declines throughout the world; the huge accumulation of unsettled war and other debts; the unparalleled restrictions imposed by nearly all nations upon imports from other nations; the break-down of the gold standard and the resultant upsetting of exchange rates between countries; the general depression of agriculture, which has brought about a loss or purchasing power by practically everybody as a result of these economic disasters and difficulties, have led to making of all kinds of proposals designed to remedy, either temporary or permanently, the situation in which mankind is now floundering.

Many of the suggestions advanced are hopelessly impractical; some are even ridiculous, and a few are not only impractical but also tend to intensify the disease rather than alleviate or cure it. Unfortunately the distress occasioned by the present world economic situation is so great, and people are so much at a loss in seeing any way out of their difficulties, or an early solution to their problems, that thousands of them are in a state of mind which causes them to propose almost anything, and, therefore, the majority of the measures made are a proposal of any given moment, however dangerous they may be to the welfare of people "falling for" them which later on they would bitterly regret.

Included in the suggestions being advanced are numerous forms of "inflation" of money. Some advocate the printing by the Government of tena, even hundreds, of millions of paper money without any reserve of any value held against them. Others demand that steps be taken to bring the Canadian dollar to a parity with the British pound sterling. In scores of communities the suggestion has been seriously supported as a means of putting more money into circulation, speeding up business and the payment of debts, and as a means of raising prices of primary products. Some extremists advocate the replacement of existing debt.

Despite the gravity of their present situation, we believe the overwhelming majority of Canadians are in favour of the payment of debts with honour, rather than that they are willing to pay their debts and incur no loss, or, only want to be placed in a position where they can pay. They feel they can pay their debts in the future, as they did in the past, if they could only obtain a fair price for their products above the cost of production, or steady work at a fair wage.

We are interested in the plan of Colin H. Burnell, past president of the United Farmers of Manitoba, who was recently outlined by him in the press. Mr. Burnell proposes what he calls the Collective Produce Clearing Association, and, in brief, his plan is this:

A farmer producer brings, say a can of cream to a dairy for which he receives a cash ticket for 50 cents. Instead of cashing that ticket, he takes it to the Collective Produce Clearing Association and exchanges it for a Bond of $1.00. His producer, in turn, cashes that bond, and the bank endorses the name on the back, and then turns it in the same as a one-dollar bill on any purchase he may make. The merchant, to whom he pays his bill, adds another 4-cent C.P.C.A. stamp, endorses the Bond in turn, and pays it to someone else, who follows the same procedure, until the Bond has four or five stamps on it, or the equivalent of 56 cents on it. When the Bank will cash it and charge it against the account of the Collective Produce Clearing Association.

What has happened is this: The farmer producer received 96 cents, instead of 50 cents, for his can of cream. His purchasing power was nearly doubled. Each of the members in the produce clearing association and the bank will receive a 4 per cent. discount on the price of their goods or services. The C.P.C.A. got the original 56 cent cash ticket from the farmer and the 56 cents paid to it for stamp, or $1.06, consequently its account at the bank was good for $1.00 when the Bond was finally presented for payment.

Unquestionably, this is a scheme of inflation, but there was 50 per cent. cash back to the producer, plus the 4 per cent. gain of the bank, and, possibly, any margin was there in the nature of a sales tax. May it not be an honest, fairly called a 4 per cent. discount? And who in these days would not willingly grant a 4 per cent. discount if the volume of business could be practically doubled? As fast as these Produce Bonds were turned over fourteen times, and then cashed, one dollar of money would be placed in general circulation instead of only fifty cents and the farmer cashed his original cream ticket in charge.

As Mr. Burnell points out, farm produce would flow to market as usual without interfering with prices which are set on an export basis. It would, he further adds, still allow of feeding the unemployed cheaply, but many of these would be absorbed by the greater volume of business which would result.

It is not argued that the scheme is perfect, nor is it a permanent solution of existing difficulties. It is admitted that it may be considered somewhat cumbersome, but, so, too, is the present situation. There may be other criticisms, but Mr. Burnell's plan certainly overcomes many of the objections properly advanced against the usual issue of scrip plan.

One seeming weakness does suggest itself, but it is a detail and does not affect the principle of the scheme. That is, in the ordinary margin six cents on the dollar, which is the price of a C.P.C.A. bond, would not be sufficient to cover the costs of operation, including printing of bonds, storage, distribution of same to all centres, and the holding of an agent of the C.P.C.A. in each country town which it is proposed should be done. However, if a 4-cent stamp on each turnover of a $1.00 Bond was not sufficient for the production of a stamp, or a 5 per cent. discount instead of four, would no doubt prove more than sufficient.

Mr. Burnell's plan is certainly deserving of further consideration and study by farmers, merchants, and, in fact, everybody because one and all are anxious to find some relief, even of a temporary character, from the impasse into which all have been brought and from which all are seeking a way of escape.

Polarograph Is New Device

Instrument Has Been Perfected Which Analyses Any Substance

The polarograph, a new instrument for chemical analysis of substance, liquid or solid, which, by the mere pressing of an electric switch, automatically analyzes on a point or four or five minutes with the kind and the amount of chemical substances present, was described at New York by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Among the many uses for the new instrument, it was explained, are almost instantaneous analysis of the contents and quality of all alcoholic liquors, which at present takes considerable time and expense. By the pressing of the button the polarograph will cut off direct alternating current in the paper which will tell exactly the kind of alcohol the liquor contains as well as the percentage.

Brevity in Speech

Ontario Judge Thinks Half Hour Address Long Enough

Much may be said for the statement made by Judge Hawley Mott when questioned by a reporter recently in Bowmanville, Ontario, as to the reason why he always spoke for 30 minutes at the weekly Canadian court. Judge Mott said that any man should be able to express himself to have in 30 minutes and if he could not he should not rise to speak. Some speakers are naturally long-winded, in fact, that by the time they have concluded their talk the chances are ten to one that the audience have completely forgotten the first part of his remarks.

Colloidal Fuel Is New

Canadian Coal Can Be Used For It Says Ottawa Engineer

Of great interest to Canadian coal miners and producers, Ottawa engineer, that Canadian coal may be used as the basis of a newly invented coal—colloidal fuel. A friend of Mr. Burnell, Stephen L. Wyndham, is the inventor, and Mr. Burnell, who was recently in Cardiff, Wales, has seen the invention.

This last week had been a feverishly busy one for Bill. With no vacation day off he was carrying an entire trading stock. Word of her good bargains had gone out by moccasin telegraph, and the pottery was rolling in beyond all her expectations. Her days were from twenty to twenty-four hours long, and she worked alone and old Dad Fences. Sleep in broken bits when she could snatch an hour or so. Sorting and grading furs as expertly as any man. It was work for any two men, and she was doing it single-handed, earning the fur-dollars to fight off the battle of life.

Faithfully carrying out Alan's instructions, she had done a bit of detective work on her own account. But she failed to gleam the slightest hint of information concerning the identity of the bandits' sudden appearance expressed her, as it had Alan; and wth good reason it made her keenly uneasy. Those men were hiding in the Thal-Azah, not many hours distant. Knowing in her heart that her family was in danger, she lived it as though she had put that fatigued pack of fur in the shed because of some animus against him. His hostility might extend to her, his daughter; and they might make some attempt against her. There were times when she thought of the many terrible brutal crimes so near her, that she wanted to flee back to the safety of the post and the mothering of Mrs. Drummond.

He said: "No, nothing much has happened. I moved up to Alan's cabin. Haskell has made Whipple a corporal. Imagining that! The new doctor for Hershell Island came along, and he and his wife and I looked at each other. He couldn't do any more than Father Claverley has done. Larry's chest wound is past the danger point; but his leg is all busted. The doctor said Larry 'ud be permanently crippled. No hope of anything better."

"Have they sent — Is Dad still there?"

"Yes. We can't spare a man to take him out. He'll be there a week or ten days yet."

"I'm thinking about my good luck here, Bill! And tell him I'll be with him as soon as I close cut this post!"

Bill nodded. Personally he hoped that this news might lift Dave MacMillan out of his depression. Drunkenness was causing him anxiety.

Resenting any kindness, he had sunk into sullen mood, uncaring, hopeless—a man brooding, self-destruction.

Joyce forced herself to ask, "Have you heard anything at all of Alan, Bill?"

"No, not a word. I don't expect to for some time."

"You know where he is and what he's doing"

Bill realized she was asking him to tell her the truth. He told her the truth; and he knew he could trust her; but Alan had asked him not to let her know where he'd gone, and Alan might have personal reasons for it.

He lied: "No, I don't know. I'd be guessing."

"But he's coming back, sometime, to Endurance?" Joyce persisted.

"He may come back any day now. But not to stay. He's out of service, brooding and nursing his wounds. And don't worry a whit; he's owing me a hundred dollars. He's a good boy."

"I guess not fifty dollars, Alan. But what in the name of sin—?"

Alan gave him the stink eye and strode out the door.

Down the terrace at the steamer landing, Joyce was waiting for him, as he had asked her. Laying his pack in Drummond's canoe and untying the painter, Alan stood gazing at the Alouette, his hands clasped behind his head.

"I've got along, Alan," she said grimly.

She gave him her hand, wishing good fortune on his venture, Alan had a vision of the lonely, fear-torn weeks ahead of Joyce. He was as brave a girl, so loyal to her dad, so trusting of him.

He was shaken with the temptation to tell Joyce of the secret and powerful circumstances which had torn him away from her and made inevitable his suggestion to her. He and Joyce, if you'll promise to take care of yourself there on the Alouette, I'll go away feeling a mighty lot happier.

"Joyce, I instructed her, "I'd like for you, there at the trading post, to question these Indians and meta when they bring in poultry. You might pick up some information about those six men."

"I'll do it, Alan. I'll do whatever you want me to, to help you—"

"Then you're going to come up and be a part of yourself, Joyce, if you'll promise to take care of yourself there on the Alouette. I'll go away feeling a mighty lot happier."

"I'll get along, Alan," she said grimly.

She left Endurance, Bill had told her that Alan had bought out and had severed relations with the Force for good and all. That was the news which Joyce had been brooding about. Elizabeth had wanted him to tell her the truth. He had lied to her; Elizabeth had wanted him to take that Victoria job. He probably would take it now. Elizabeth had had her way with him. The thing which had held her and Alan apart no longer existed.

For more than a year Joyce had seen Alan Baker slipping away from her, little by little. She had fought for her secret hopes as one will fight in the face of death. She wanted Alan back; she wanted him like a child, and now Joyce, who was once a strong and courageous young woman, had gone back to the rackling doubt. She, too, had come to the parting of the ways, and must take some irrevocable step.

There was a moment's silence. Bill looked down at the rock, plucking with trembling fingers at the wolf-fur moss, she was pale. "Did Alan say—" the words came slowly like reluctant footsteps—"say anything about what had got him?"

"He's going to take that job in Victoria. Told me. One of the last things he said."

Some stay at home because they say the weather's cold
And some to vent a little spiven, because they've got a "huff."
Some stay away because they've long in single harness tarried.
And some because, as they protest, they've settled down and married!

Some keep from Church because they find the members "cold and funny."

Who never clasp them by the hand, unless they're after money."

And some bewail with pious face "the worldliness of sin
That finds a lodgement in the Church" so never enter in.
Alas! Alas! excuses grow to drive our thoughts from God
And turn us from the house of prayer, the place our Savior trod

Vol. 2, No. 29 Arrowwood, Mar. 9, 1933

Items for That

Beginning of the End.

Wheat has made a nice gain in the last few days. Hogs have scored a substantial advance. South of '49 the new administration seems to have taken the bull by the tail and looked things squarely in the eye and we surmize we will soon be on the road for better things. At least here is hoping.

Grain cleaning season is here. If you are expecting large yields of the best quality you must sow only the best kernels from your seed bin. There is no better way to get these large Viking grain cleaners than by running your grain through. Viking grain cleaners. Not only does this cleaner grade your seed but also fans it and removes all wild oats. If you have never seen the Viking grain cleaner work ask for a demonstration. We have a cleaner on our floor that we will rent at a very nominal cost.

You may need a small engine to operate your cleaners, pumps, and other small units. There is no more dependable power plant than a John Deere all enclosed self oiling unit. We can secure a new unit for you at a reduced price. If you are interested in a new engine it will pay you to see us promptly.
